Hitler's sister; was living in Berlin with her husband as the personal guest of Robert LE [REDACTED] at the time of the Duke of WINDSOR's visit to Germany; she was still there in 1940 and 1941, and was seen less often at the Berghof in recent years; there seems little doubt that she had a row with Hitler; her alleged "middle class instincts" may have been shocked by the some of the lady visitors at the Berghof, especially those little movie queens who GOEBBELS brought there.

REICHENAU, GENERAL VON (deceased)

Made a fetish of good health, and went in for violent exercise; still, would never have done so against doctor's orders, and his sudden death by a stroke seemed strange coming at a time when Germans were retreating; always known as a Nazi general, and may have dared to criticise Hitler, as an old friend of the party; this might have displeased HIMMLER very much; he is ambitious for military power himself and would do everything in his power to get rid of generals that were in his way, whether they were Nazis or not.
